"They thought I was certifiedly crazy." This was the Reaction Roy Shvartzapel pastry shop, he claims to have obtained six years ago when he told his colleagues and friends that he was starting a panettone activity only online. "People said, what are you thinking? This never work. Nobody in America knows what panettone is, much less people to buy enough to justify a company," says the resident of the Bay Area. But Shvartzapel, who had worked with the best chefs including Pierre Hermé ©, Ferran Adrià f, Thomas Keller, and I learned to do panettone by Iginio Massari-a man considered to be the godfather of the Italian-so-called pastry chefs that he was on somethingThe chef Roy Shvartzapelcounsy "I had a belief, perhaps because I had spent so much time in Europe, Italy and France, which was only a matter of time before someone introduced a category already existed. I did not do it. Introduce this Category of panettone that is not the non-edible $ 7.99, produced in June that we all knew. I have not invented anything. I may have been a catalyst to bring the panettone adequate attention to the United States and introduce people to a quality level of a product that had existed for some time. "The answer was lively. So lively, in fact, that Shvartzapel cannot keep his panettone in stock. The Christmas pre-orders on the oven website of him were closed for almost two weeks. The site still accepts the New Year pre-orders, however, and for an exclusive holiday, Shvartzapel has collaborated with the Gucci Osteria da Massimo Boutura by Beverly Hills to create two limited edition flavors that sell for $ 150: orange candle with Raisin and orange With hazelnut ganduja. While Panettone undoubtedly has a culinary moment now, his long story is worth exploring. Here is everything you want to know about it. The by Shvartzapel is available in two tastes: orange candied raisins and chocolate. In terms of ingredients change, Borri states that while traditional Italian versions of Panettone are always made using butter, some producers use a less expensive type of fat, such as margarine, which also represents lower prices. Eataly sells panettoni from about 20 different producers, with flavors ranging from classic candied fruit to pistachio to dark chocolate and in size up to 10 kilograms. Eataly "It is very difficult to make a good high quality product for many people," says Borri. "This is why even three-michelin star chefs are preparing their panettone. It's a handcrafted product and you can create an incredible panettone if you use some unique products." Overall, chefs' skills, ingredients and the process they use to make Panettone explain the difference in prices. There is also a range of sizes. A standard panettone is a kilogram, but Eataly sells panettone in size up to 10 kilograms. Borri says that the more the panettone, the more wet and airy is inside. Vincenzo Pinto/AFP // Getty Imagea Panettone Festival in New York City Cristiano Rossi grew up in Italy and had the idea to launch the inaugural New York Festival dedicated to Panettone after opening two Italian pastries in the city. "I realized that the Americans could not get all the bread we had in Italy and think it is only a sweet bread with raisins and candies, but in Italy we have a panettone full of pistachio or chocolate or truffles or vin santo," says Rossi. "Last Christmas, I brought the canes from famous producers to the United States and I sold more than 500 in two days!" Courtesyapter who,He saw that there was a request for high-end panettone from the best Italian chefs and decided to launch New York York Festival in Long Island City, started last weekend and continues on 18 and 19 December. The festival is free and open to the public. The chef's pantons including Massari are available for sale and the answer last weekend was strong that 3000 visitors participated and purchased the whole inventory, pushing an early closure on Sunday. Rossi plans to open an Italian ice cream shop, the Santa Chiara Caffè ©, at the beginning of 2022 on the ground floor of the 52-41 Center Boulevard, a 44-storey residential building at Hunters Point South near where the Festival takes place in Long Island City. He said that a new trend in Italy provides for the salty panettone service with olive oil and bacon and salt instead of sugar. It is not yet known if those will appeal to the next Panetone Festival of Rossi.
